PARENTS’ CORNER

HOME LIBRARY

Many children enjoy creating a place in the home to store books that have special meaning. Encouraging children to collect their personal favorites can nurture their interests in books and support a lifelong love of reading. Here’s how you can build a home library:

Find a special place. If your children’s rooms do not already have a bookshelf or a bookcase, use a box, basket or other sturdy container. Plastic stacking “cubes” work well and come in many colors. Remember to make the books accessible to your child by placing them at their reach.

Encourage your children to choose books to add to their collection. A book-buying trip to a yard sale or a bookstore can make a fun Saturday morning family activity. While choosing books, talk about the cover, the author, illustrator, the pictures and ask why your child is interested in the book.

Take your children to the library regularly. Even children with well-stocked bookshelves enjoy new reading material. Encourage your children to keep their library books alongside their own books to treat them with the same care and attention.

For babies and young toddlers, choose sturdy books to survive rough handling. Board books, for example, have thick pages that can be turned easily and wiped clean. Remember to look at the books with your baby or toddler and talk about the pictures.
